Science

Home learning - week 5

Weather!

Over the last two weeks we have been learning about the weather.

We have looked at different types of weather and how we can record the weather.

We were very impressed with some of your paper windmills that helped you record the wind.

We also measured the rain and the temperature.

This week we are going to use that information to make our own weather report!

Weather reporters use their information to give us a report on the weather where we live. They let us know what it will be like today but they also use lots of information to let us know what it will be like for the rest of the week. This is called a weather forecast.

Making your own weather report.

It is up to you how you present your weather report.

You might want to draw it, remember to include the day, the weather type and the temperature like this.

Thursday
Cloudy

Or, you might want to present it like a weather presenter on TV!

Watch the video below for some ideas.